Who Says You Can't Go Home?
Robinson & Cole Welcomes Back Third Attorney

HARTFORD, CT (January 26, 2012) – Alaine C. Doolan returns to Robinson & Cole LLP as a senior associate in the firm's Business Section, primarily practicing in the areas of intellectual property, technology law, and brand management. Ms. Doolan worked at the firm as a trademark analyst while attending law school and as an associate before venturing out to explore other platforms, including in-house positions where she managed more than 4,000 worldwide trademark portfolios for two large consumer products companies.

Ms. Doolan is the third attorney in 18 months to return to Robinson & Cole. Earlier this year, the firm welcomed back health law associate Brian D. Nichols, and in 2011 public finance counsel Glenn G. Rybacki returned as well to continue his career.

Ms. Doolan focuses her practice on the protection of corporate brands, with an emphasis on the prosecution, maintenance, and enforcement of intellectual property, including trademarks and copyrights as well as policing and enforcement, advertising and packaging review, anticounterfeiting, and social media.

As part of her brand management work, Ms. Doolan counsels and advises clients on matters related to print, digital, and mobile advertising; intellectual property protection and enforcement; and federal and state regulatory compliance issues, including compliance with the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act's labeling requirements and various Federal Trade Commission regulations. She received her J.D. from Quinnipiac University School of Law, her B.A. from Central Connecticut State University, and her A.S. from Manchester Community College. Ms. Doolan is a resident of Bristol, Connecticut.
