Connecticut Technology Council Appoints Jacqueline Pennino Scheib to Board of Directors

HARTFORD, CT (January 7, 2016) – The Connecticut Technology Council has appointed Robinson+Cole partner Jacqueline Pennino Scheib to its Board of Directors. The Connecticut Technology Council, the state's catalyst for innovation and growth, appointed five new board members, including Ms. Scheib, at its Annual Meeting on December 9, 2015. Board members serve a three-year term during which they help lead the council in its mission to spur job creation and support Connecticut's growing technology companies.

Ms. Scheib leads the Intellectual Property and Technology Law Group at Robinson+Cole. Her experience spans the breadth of protecting company brands, intellectual property, and technology resources, from enforcing trademark and copyright registrations and rights, to providing solutions for numerous aspects of doing business online, and counseling on joint ventures, strategic alliances, and mergers and acquisitions, as well as on commercial contract needs. Ms. Scheib works with a wide variety of clients but has particular depth of experience handling healthcare, consumer product, and food and beverage clients. She is actively involved as a board member of a number of professional organizations, including the Crossroads Venture Group and the Connecticut Chapter of the MIT Enterprise Forum.

About the Connecticut Technology Council
