Robinson+Cole Continues Growth in Boston with the Addition of Partners in Health Care and Insurance

Firm welcomes Kathleen Healy and Matthew Burke as partners

BOSTON (April 11, 2022) – Robinson+Cole announces the addition of Kathleen G. Healy in its Health Law Group and Health Care Industry Team, and Matthew M. Burke in the firm's Insurance + Reinsurance Group. Healy joins from Verrill Dana LLP and Burke joins from Robins Kaplan LLP. Both are partners resident in Robinson+Cole's Boston office.

"We are excited to welcome Kate and Matt to Robinson+Cole," said Rhonda J. Tobin, Robinson+Cole's Managing Partner. "They are talented and successful lawyers who bring significant experience, expertise and depth to some of our most strategic practices. They are natural fits for our strong health care and insurance teams. Adding Kate and Matt furthers our strategic plan by continuing our growth in large commercial centers and in some of our most high-profile practices."

Healy advises health care entities on transactional and complex health care regulatory matters. She represents a wide range of clients, including hospital systems, behavioral health providers, physician groups, accountable care organizations, clinically integrated networks, data collaboratives and health plans. Healy counsels clients with respect to strategic affiliations, mergers and acquisitions, joint ventures, including cross-sector ventures, and other transactional matters. She advises clients with respect to the formation and operation of accountable care organizations and clinically integrated networks, including participation in the Medicare Shared Savings Program and other innovative payment programs. Her experience also includes representing clients with respect to data collaboratives and big data issues, as well as developing data-sharing agreements and data policies, and advice about secondary uses of data, vendor contracting, electronic data sharing, risk assessments, and data breach responses. Known for her deep knowledge of health care regulations and practical approach, Healy is skilled at helping clients navigate complex health care regulatory frameworks.

Burke has more than 30 years of experience representing insurers in claims and litigation. His practice encompasses all forms of insurance and commercial insurance policies, including first-party property, professional liability, representations and warranties, tax, third-party liability, and reinsurance. Burke has handled multiple arbitrations and litigated matters in state and federal court across the country. During his career, Burke has worked on insurance coverage cases involving a number of high-profile natural and man-made catastrophes, including Hurricane Katrina, Superstorm Sandy, West Virginia mine explosions, and various insurance claims related to the 9/11 terrorist attack. His experience includes coverage under property and liability policies for losses arising out of COVID-19 pandemic; claims advice and arbitration under representation and warranty policies; and claims advice and litigation under various professional liability and Directors and Officers insurance policies. Burke also has extensive experience working with the Lloyd's insurance market, acting as coordinating counsel for complex and recurring first-party property claims.

Healy and Burke are the latest partners to join the Boston office following last year's addition of real estate finance and affordable housing partner, Deirdre Robinson, government and corporate investigations and white-collar criminal defense partner, Seth Orkand, and complex commercial litigation partner, Amanda Phillips. Earlier this year, Robinson+Cole welcomed a New York-based capital markets and securities team led by Arla Zhou as a partner along with associates Yang Xu and Tiange \(Tim\) Chen to complement the firm's existing capital markets and securities team.
